ADVERTISEMENT
Don't blame your age for poor hearing
Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.
True, all hearing problems are not alike . . . and some cannot be helped by a hearing aid. But audiologists report that many can. So, send for this non-operating model now. Wear it in the privacy of your own home to see how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.
These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 9922, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Ill. 60646.

IN MEMORIAM
In Memoriam of my brother, Spencer Chambers
April 5, 1922 - Nov. 20, 1976
An ever present smile and a hearty "hello" were the trademarks of Spencer Chambers.
He was a active member in his church, Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church, and community until his illness some years ago.
In years to come many would wonder, "Who was Spencer Chambers?"
Words can't answer their yet unasked questions. Superlatives abounded in his years of existence. From the beginning he was destined to become a big man.
On Nov. 20, 1976, a massive cardiac arrest ended his brief journey through life. He died in Lynchburg General Hospital.
Oh, God, teach me that 60 seconds make a minute
And a hundred cents a dollar
Help me that I might earn my meq ticket on the square
And in so doing do unto others as I would have them do unto me.
And when comes the days of darkening shades—
Make the ceremony brief
And the epitaph real simple
Here lies a man.

By Dan Daniel

Just over three months ago, we reported on a budding effort to impose a form of censorship and control on news which passed back and forth between the free world and the nations of the so-called "Third World". The United National Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization decided not to bring this up quite yet, and it can be hoped that reason will prevail and the matter will never be considered. It is a weak hope, however, for the proposal has the backing of Russia and other communist governments.
And why shouldn't it? The system has worked just fine for them for a number of years, now. The proposition is outrageous only to those people who enjoy a free form of government, for only in such a government can a free press exist.
No better example can be found of this freedom than in our own country and the episode involving a former television reporter. Now, I happen to think that what Daniel Schorr did, in passing on for publication a report of the House Committee investigating the Central Intelligence Agency was despicable and treacherous. I fall short of calling it treason only because of fine points of the law. It is interesting, however, that when he was interviewed by a Washington television station, and was asked if he still though what he had done was right, he hedged. He said instead that while he felt he had not acted illegally, "reporters have to accept the necessity to act responsibly".
In this one instance (and if it received attention other than locally, I am not aware of it), the reporter spoke volumes about a matter which is much discussed, but sometimes little understood.
We have said before that the Construction and the Bill of Rights are concerned with two entirely different matters. The document itself is the framework of government, setting forth those things which government can do. And the Bill of Rights sets limits to those actions which a potentially repressive government might take against the people.
Books about the Bill of Rights fill the libraries, but for our purpose right now, we will discuss only one element. That is the First Admendment.
Now, this is a straightforward, forty-five word sentence. It is unencumbered by the legalese which sometimes muddies our laws, and the bureaucratese which always befuddles the reader: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assembly, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." Imagine what the folks at HEW could do with that, if it had to be interpreted through the Federal Register.
In times of war, the freedoms incorporated in these words have been suspended, but when the emergency ended they have been restored, if sometimes reluctantly, to the people. Frequently the "emergency" was more apparent than real, as with the Alien and Sedition Acts of the late Eighteenth Century, when the "enemy" was a rival political party. Habeas Corpus (by which a person detained must be brought before a court or a judge) and other civil liberties were suspended during the War Between the States, and the Espionage Act of 1917 denied the people these rights as well.
In 1940, the first peacetime sedition statute since 1798 was passed. The Smith Act made it a crime to advocate violent overthrow of the Government. This was followed by the Internal Security Act of 1950 and the Communist Control Act of 1954. It is important to note that while these Acts clearly limited free speech, in a 1969 opinion, the Supreme Court took into account "world affairs which have determined the whole course of our national policy since the close of World War II, and . . . the vast burdens which these conditions have entailed for the entire nation." In summary, the Court found that the circumstances of the period clearly limited the Constitutional protection of free speech. This limitation was based on "the right of self-preservation, 'the ultimate value of any society'."
It might be imagined that in the 185 years since the Bill of Rights was ratified, every conceivable question has been long since measured against the First Amendment. Yet in 1975, certain portions of the Federal Election Act were struck, because a limitation on the amount an individual could spend on his own election was found to be a limitatiln on his freedom of speech. And we have commented earlier that undue restrictions on lobbying could well be interpreted as a violation of the right of people not just to free speech, but of their right to petition the government for redress of grievances.
Philosophers might argue for years whether the significance of the First Amendment rests on its reflection of the founders' view of history or on its effect on the developing American character.

We thought you should know... that in many parts of the country the cost of a hospital room (not including doctors, special nurses and medicines) is approaching $200 per day.
What's the point? The point is, this is just one of the many circumstances helping to push the cost of insurance beyond the reach of many.
You can help by talking to your neighbors and friends, writing your representatives in government and contacting your insurance commissioner. Or, by talking to us.
Then maybe you won't just blame your insurance company and your agent.
The people who understand the problem, the better prepared we'll all be to work out the solutions.
